SAN SIMON RANCH, Cal.
Dec. 13.—What is the best part of this marvelous Western country?
Everybody, from the Northern boundary down to the Mexican frontier, believes that the best place is where he lives. The man from the East is bewitched, like a fly in a pastry shop.

SEATTLE SAYS. "Come here, and you will never leave. Our future will be wonderful, but the present is all that any human being could ask for, sunshine, health, happiness. Come here, where snow, raw winds and coal hills are only nightmare memory."

FROM PETALUMA, towards the north, local patriotism wires, "Come and see the egg basket of the world. And near here, the only place where men harness and use live steam coming up from the earth."
The egg basket refers to the fact Petaluma is the greatest chicken and egg producing center on earth.

THE INHABITANTS of the Imperial Valley, where the soil is literally worth more than all the gold mines of California put together, tell you that they possess the earthly paradise. Rasaela, even in his happy valley, might have envied them. Imperial Valley or Heaven is their motto.

LITTLE PLACES, and great cities, like Los Angeles and San Francisco, all have good reasons, and you can't gain them.
The little place says, "We shall be as big as Los Angeles some day. Come now, and let your pocketbook grow up with the town."

Los Angeles says the little place will grow of course. "But while they gain nothing, we shall have completed our second million, and be started towards five millions."

SAN FRANCISCO, where the old memories, big banks, importing and exporting houses, with thousands of seasoned California business men, live, distrust all competition.

"Look at our golden Gate, the harbor due by the Divine Engineer. Study our railroads. Go where you please, every place is good. But this, the central spot on the California coast, will always be what it always has been, California's great city."

OAKLAND ASKS. "Is that so, what about Oakland?"
That city across the bay from San Francisco is what might be called a "California Brooklyn. Brooklyn already has more inhabitants than Manhattan, the original New York. Oakland is determined to have more population, more business, more manufacture, more money, more everything than the old, established San Francisco.

WHILE YOU are wondering, telegrams come by the dozen from Florida, where this column is printed in several newspapers.

From Jacksonville, Tampa, Palm Beach, West Palm Beach and Miami come messages of rebuke and information.

WE ARE ONLY a few hours from New York, New England and the people with real money to spend. Why don't you write about Florida?

"Haven't you heard that Henry Ford loads his ships at Henry's house near Detroit and unloads them here in the port of Jacksonville? This will be a greater port than Los Angeles or New York."

MIAMI TELEGRAPHS: "We receive daily automobile loads of land buyers from Atlantic City and New York. Our enterprising buyers provide free transportation. Chicago, Monte Carlo and Manchester, England, combined—none have the good conditions on Page 2, Column 5."

REVERE TEACHERS TO GET XMAS PAY; STATE FLAYS CITY

School teachers of Revere will not have to go without their Christmas pay checks.

An emergency grant of $15,000 in order that they might be paid on time was approved today by the State Board of Emergency Appropriations.

The board at the same time censured the administrative forces of Revere for having allowed a situation to arise whereby for the first time in local history it was necessary for the state to appropriate money to meet teachers' salaries.

When it was found there was a default in the city funds a teachers' strike was threatened. The teachers later voted to remain at their posts.

FLAYED BY BOARD.
In a letter to the mayor and city council of Revere, the board denounced them for what it termed shortsightedness and lack of knowledge of the statute and their "careless methods of procedure without positive knowledge of the amount of money actually provided and arranged for the payment of bills."

Attorney-General J. H. Bennett, state Treasurer James Jackson and Director of Accounts Theodore M. Waddell compose the Board on Emergency Appropriations.

AUTO THIEF SUSPECT SHOT IN MAINE CHASE

Banger, Mr. Dec. 13.—Harry Butler, twenty-five, of New Bedford, Mass., alleged automobile thief was shot and captured when deputy sheriffs and citizens surrounded a barn on the outskirts of the town of Pittsford after a thirty-five mile chase from this city.

Butler and two companions, Joseph McFadden and Joseph Gill of Brunswick, are alleged to have stolen a motor car here late in the night. Sheriff Penland organized a posse and gave chase.

At New Bedford, the alleged thieves sought refuge in a barn. When the posse arrived, Butler emerged and confronted the pursuers. He pointed a finger at the posse with the command "Throw up your hands!"

Believing he held a gun in his hand the posse opened fire. Butler fell with a wound in the thigh. McFadden and Gill were captured without a struggle.

U. S. STARTS NEW DRIVE ON BOOTLEGS

A new and important government drive against liquor selling in seven towns was started today, when eleven warrants were issued in the Federal Court for local establishments.

It was understood that the first of these warrants would be served today and that a cleanup of known bootlegging places will be made.

Whether or not the recent removal of Judge Robert C. Harris as U. S. Attorney had any bearing on the new campaign could not be learned.

For some time past there has been a pull in the activities of Federal prohibition enforcement agents in this city.

It is said the new drive may have been prompted by the recent attacks on Chief Prohibition agent Elmer C. Potter, who is under fire by the prohibitionists for lax enforcement.

The witness said marriage had been discussed at the last meeting with the young woman, whose name was not divulged in court.

He said he was unable to recall what had been said on the subject.

POSTAL PAY BILL HALTED IN SENATE

Washington, Dec. 13.—An effort for an agreement for consideration of the postal pay increase bill failed today in the Senate.

The plan proposed would have provided that the bill be taken up January 8, but Senator Reed, Democrat of Missouri, blocked it because it contained references of the measure to a committee. He declared it was an effort to kill.

LABOR CHIEFTAIN WINS RACE TO DIE ON AMERICAN SOIL

San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 13. (A.P.)—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, gained his wish, death on American soil, after a heroic effort to remain alive over the 1,000-mile route from Mexico City to San Antonio.

Mr. Gompers' last words were: "Nurse, this is the end. God bless our American institutions. May they grow better day by day."

Gompers was the personal friend of ex-American President—McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson, Harding and Coolidge.

The primary cause of death was acute heart disease with pulmonary edema, complicated by advanced aortic and cerebral arteriosclerosis.

Mr. Gompers had been improving early in the night and had taken two or three naps, but a change occurred at 2:30 a. m. and his heart began to fail, refusing to respond to drugs.

Mr. Gompers was conscious much of the time and was able to talk to his physicians about administering a hypodermic.

Apparently he knew the end was near and called some of his closest friends to his bedside, with whom he talked over his own funeral arrangements.

As William D. Malton of Detroit, president of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Employees, came to his bedside, he read for his hand, called him "Bill," and to his handcup responded with a feeble effort.

James Duncan of Quincy, Mass., a vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, who had known Mr. Gompers for forty-four years, was another close friend who was among the first to be summoned.

FUNERAL ARRANGED.
An official of the Federation who was members of Mr. Gompers' party on the trip from Mexico City, where he was taken ill, was present when he died.

Immediately after Mr. Gompers' death, members of the executive council of the Federation and other officials held a meeting for the purpose of drawing up a funeral statement and making funeral arrangements.

Mr. Gompers' faithful nurse, Miss Matilda May of Atlantic City, and a San Antonio woman nurse, were left with the body.

It was reported at 5:30 a. m. that Mr. Gompers was going, his physician said. He was told by Dr. Lee Turn over.

Bobbed hair proved the undoing of two Watertown girls who fled their homes early yesterday for a life of freedom in the big city. The girls, Katherine M. Hall, 14, of No. 14 Porter street, and Alice Geyikyan, 15, of No. 82 Dexter avenue, left home in a taxi.

Louis G. Washington street barber, noted the suspicious actions of the girls when they came into his shop to have their hair bobbed. Today he notified the Boston police and the girls were found in a Union Park street lodging house.

GOMPERS' LIFE WAS FIGHT FOR IDEALS OF THE AMERICAN WORKING MAN

DEATH AT DAWN

CLASH OF GOMPERS' MAJORITY

When of San Antonio, attending him, that he was in a critical condition and might not live out the night. The dying man breathed more heavily for a moment, but there was no other response.

Officials of the Federation gathered about the bedside. The strain of the vigil was apparent on many of them.

Some of them stepped into the hall and a few gave way to tears, as it was apparent their comrade of many years was passing on.

Dr. Rice watched the patient's medical history after his arrival in San Antonio briefly as follows:

"The heart rate on arrival was 105, but under the influence of digitalis it had slowed down to 140 at 11 a. m. From this time he was improving until a sudden collapse occurred at 2:30 a. m. and the heart resumed its response to stimulation.

"Emphysema was noted and he was held a pint and a half of fluid to relieve congestion of his lungs. After each procedure he rallied for a few minutes but almost at once collapsed.

"It was told he had been stricken from diabetes. Two specimens taken during the evening were free from sugar and this threat did not pass without investigation when it was found he is not known how long this condition had existed.

"It was told Mr. Gompers at 3:30 that he was in a critical condition and might not pass through the night. He understood but did not respond, his heavy breathing preventing any spoken words."

Gompers' Life Was Fight for Ideals of the American Working Man

Boston Had Special Interest in "Mighty Little Leader" of Federation

History will find a distinguished place for the life and accomplishments of Samuel Gompers.

The organized leader of organized labor in the United States, a fighter of worldwide reputation and a man of forward vision, Samuel Gompers took a powerful part in bringing the war with Germany and Austria to a successful conclusion.

The struggle he became the leader of organized labor in America, Gompers had to fight. He was fighting day and night for the laborer and his followers thought with him, and this early struggle ended him in good stead when he was not to the real test in 1917, the year America declared war.

HISTORICAL STRIKE

Boston had a special interest in this "mighty little man." Not only because the battle was fought for many years in Boston, but also because of the degree of excitement and the emotion which he and other workers had in the city.

On January 9, 1919, he secured the late Police Commissioner Curtis of the police strike. He made the "association while addressing the assembly of the Chamber of Commerce at the city hall."

The change of the police strike from a strike to a strike of the police to a strike of the police was a change of the police strike from a strike of the police to a strike of the police.

DEATH AT DAWN

FOR 'MIGHTY LITTLE LEADER' OF THE AMERICAN WORKING MAN

He was one of the most remarkable labor leaders the world has known, and he will be missed.

"The death of Mr. Gompers is a great loss to the organized labor movement in this country in which he has been for so many years a leader. He was a man of remarkable force of character, courage and self-sacrifice. His skill in controlling conflicting elements in the Federation.

"Although in recent years he has been somewhat conservative, his influence has been unquestioned. Once he gave his word to a cause he was up to the hilt in his determination to see it through. His aggressive spirit, however, was tempered by his support of the Federal Government.

Max went on amiably. "And where's Nora Lee?" "Isn't she staying here?" "And Max?" "Let's have a look at all the girls, little Mima."

An audible purring. "Oh—every one's busy. Come in, I want to talk to you about a house. I'm ready. We'll see them later."

Six child—I'm out for fun. Call the kids. Oh, I say, Sallie, be to the kids."

Sally stepped back silently, waited. Sallie called again and she answered with a beautifully feline "Oh!" of surprise.

Two minutes later they were all patting on hats and coats for a ride this warm moonlight night in May. Max held Nora Lee back to whisper "I came for you. Kiss in front."

She flushed with excited pleasure. "That's all I want. I've got to wait my step. Come other time. Take Sally."

Sally climbed in, joyously, questioning the collision. Her clean, glowing skin turned a delicate pink, the green eyes were brilliant. Nora Lee thought "Sally could be a wonder."

Why Mrs. Seal Came Ashore

By Foxy Grandpa

"FOXY GRANDPA," said Bobby, as we walked along the rocky coast of Northern Canada, "you wouldn't think that these seals out there really had brains, would you?"

"What do you mean, Bobby?" I asked.

"They look as slick and shiny," he responded.

"That's right," I agreed. "And the funny part of it is that they really have brains."

"How do you know that?" Bobby asked.

"I know," I said. "I saw them in the water in which they live is very cold, as you may well imagine."

"The water," Bobby said. "I'm sure that the seals may keep warm under their skin, but I'm sure that they don't keep warm under their skin."

"That's right," I said. "I'm sure that the seals may keep warm under their skin, but I'm sure that they don't keep warm under their skin."

NEW GERMAN ENVOY TO WORK FOR DAWES PLAN

Berlin, Dec. 13 (Universal Wire)—"My aim and main purpose in my new post at Washington shall be to help in carrying out the Dawes Plan, the principles of which I have laid down by General Dawes, Owen Young and Ambassador Houghton. The German people are determined to carry through."

This pledge was made by Baron Ago von Maltzan, the newly chosen Ambassador to the United States.

One of his first tasks, he said, would be to iron out the difficulties in the way of ratification of the German-American treaty of commerce.

LAWSON IN MAD BATTLE FOR GOLD

Suicide an Obsession With Radcliffe Girl

LOOKING FOR THE VERY LAST STATE GAS WAR

HIS is the twelfth chapter of the thrilling career of Thomas W. Lawson, ostensible hero of America's "Wall Street" and close to poverty in his latest retreat into the coast of Maine, in body and purse and gone forever from the heart of State Street. In preceding chapters the Boston American has told of his first adventures in the business world—showing gold in a Boston banking house, his $50,000 gamble, his first "Wall Street" selling fire extinguishers, his love affair, his opening of a bucket shop, his $500,000 adventure, the auction sale, his "busted" bubble, his escape from an assassin and his gas adventure. Today the narrative is continued.

ADVENTURE OF THE DOUBLE CROSS

PRACTICALLY all of Tom Lawson's exciting and romantic life and around the money change was an excellent post-graduate course in the fine art of double-crossing and Professor John Edward O'Sullivan Addicks was one of the best teachers.

One fine morning Mayo Matthews was asked on the way down to City Hall to deliver a lecture to his students on the subject of the gas companies and that Addicks had been the one to double-cross him. Lawson, however, suddenly grew wiser.

"Thank you for your offer of the $500,000 profit," he said, "but we will not do such offers on. My pay comes from my gas. I have never known the man who could take pay from both sides and do his work properly."

Warned of Addicks

Rogers agreed to accept as a pledge in evidence of good faith $100,000 of new Boston bonds that Addicks had deposited to Lawson. He had the right to leave for the acquisition of new property.

Two weeks later he told me that he was Addicks on the hands on which he had not yet used for his complete or stolen for himself. Lawson, however, with every facial indication of incredulity.

"Yes, he has time and again assured me of this and he would not dare to lie to me under existing conditions."

Then Rogers pointed out that he was fifty-six while Lawson was only thirty-seven and a child in the oil man's eye, proceeded to warn the financier against Addicks' double-crossing and that it rolled off Lawson's tongue as back his water of a duck's back.

Now, according to Lawson, the Standard Oil man revealed the point he had been endeavoring to bring the financier to.

"You will come with me," urged Rogers, "and we will fix up the Boston situation in some way that will give you the $500,000 and your knowledge of the market and your investors will mean."

"You and I can figure out a scheme that will take care of every other interest and will give Addicks a lot more money than he can secure in any other way and show him the door."

"I shall put you in a position to make more real money and secure more power than you could by any other means in a like time under any other conditions. You know corporations and the stock market and you can really see what the combination of money and power and your knowledge of the market and your investors will mean."

"In the end, I will have in mind the germ of what later was to be done."

Lawson Switches

Now Lawson—seeing a light, he claimed, and fearful that Addicks had still another double-cross in his sleeve ready for withdrawal at the first opportunity—momentarily switched his action once more and opened negotiations with "Cling" Rogers for making the gas war.

By this time the end battle for millions had developed into a contest of looking and listening, of bribery and corruption, of high and wide-finance and into a foot ball on the seal of American business and politics.

In his carrying out of his new purpose the Boston financier at a week's end one night pulled the electric latch-string of Rogers' home at No. 26 East Fifty-seventh street, New York.

A few moments later, he was seated beside, engaged in a memorable conference with the Standard Oil chief.

Henry H. Rogers is dead and his grave—resting place eventually of all men, no matter what their wealth and pomp and power has been on earth. Even if he were alive and could talk of this conference, the probability is that he would refuse. Therefore the word of Tom Lawson as to the negotiations must be taken.

"I spoke my piece rapidly and without interruption," declared Lawson. "I said: 'There are only four things I am sure of. If you and I come to no settlement by tomorrow night I will, without warning, turn the gas war on you and the notes of our different companies and have a receiver appointed.'"

"Then, the gas war, I went down with Addicks and the rest, for we have all put our personal reputations behind the enterprise. I will see that the how following the crash shall be such as all must hear, and I will call attention to the illegal acts of everyone—your companies, Addicks' companies and City and State officials who have made such conditions possible."

His Deal with Rogers

"That leaves only three possibilities. You say you are buying or we consolidate. I will take the third line. Under any circumstances or conditions will you join forces and do—"

"Under no circumstances or conditions will I do any business with Addicks," Rogers shot back and has played me false, broken his word and lied to me when there was no necessity for doing so. No man who has done this once can ever do business with me a second time and I will see that he is paid for it."

"That we have but two possibilities. Will you buy us out at the price we must have?"

"What is the price?"

"Sufficient to make good the promises that I have made to Addicks, my friends and the public since I have been in command," I replied.

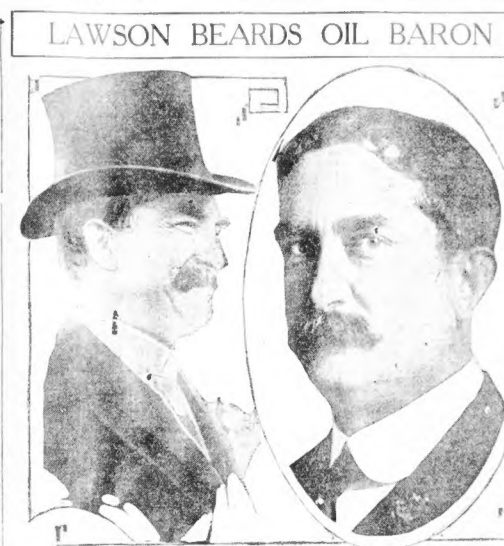

"That is just as an impossibility."

"Then, Mr. Rogers, we are down to the last. You must sell and we must buy you out."

"Right! Now how do you propose to buy?"

Ultimately, Rogers agreed to sell me for $1,000,000, or for the amount, or $450,000, if credit of a nature that secured him of his money eventually.

The Standard Oil chief offered to deliver the million-dollar bill to Lawson on a fifty-fifty basis. The

BRENDEL LIKES COMEDY IN 'JANICE'

New York, Dec. 13—Monday Night, valued at between $25,000 and $10,000, was seen in Mid-Herby great testament by prohibition agents.

Alcohol filling three bottles and four casks were seized, and labels proclaiming the contents to be "Bare old Scotch, bottled in bond, Edinburgh, February, 1876," were found.

Three arrests were made.

Art of clowning in the way he handles his role in "Janice Meredith."

This is the tribute from one girl to another.

To make people laugh, observed the irrepressible "Gus the Bunk" in his review of the play, is the spirit for more study and research of medical reactions than to make him cry.

In almost all cases the great-day play is nothing but a rehashing, revision or repackaging of some laugh-getter used years and years ago. The Bunk is making them cry in the theatre hardly undergo any change. They're sort of static.

TALKED OF DEATH AND POISONS

Grace Williams was on "Social Probation" for Smoking. Authorities Say

Grace Williams, eighteen-year-old Radcliffe freshman, who with her sister, Margaret Seagrave, a junior, attempted suicide last Monday night by taking poison, was on "social probation" at the time of the attempted suicide.

The girl was released from being absent from her dormitory after seven weeks of the two weeks. The punishment was given because the Williams girl had smoked in the college dormitory. The social probation was not imposed by the Radcliffe, but by the Student Government Association, an organization of students.

A peculiar feature of the case was that the Williams girl, knowing that she had been a smoker, risked her health by taking poison. The student government association, an organization of students, had a social probation for smoking. Back year the interest in the hockey season was at its height. It was the second season the boys have had the use of the arena and though the boys for some time have been their efforts in taking advantage of the opportunity.

It would be well for those making up the so-called hockey list in sports not to overlook the fact that the Boston High School puck players.

The first game was on promptly at 7:30 a. m. with the first encounter finishing up at 9 o'clock. That means that some of these lads are up at 6 o'clock.

Best Sporting Element

How can the best of the hockey spirit be found in the city schools. There are no sporting thrills to encourage them on, only the stimulus of their own desire which is interrupted by the striking cry of the referee.

Often times, especially in hard play, the first cause is to stop for want of daylight.

Breakfast is a necessary item with the lads. After that they are up on the ice in the morning.

The members of the Massachusetts Bar are pleading the cause of the sports department's action of the Boston American's Christmas basket fund. They are making their appeal with a shower of $100 bills.

The attorneys have formed a Lawyers' Club just for the purpose of putting the Christmas fund on top. Each member of the bar is asked to contribute $100 to help purchase food for the poor children and their parents on Christmas Day. Of course there have been some contributions of more than $100, but it is felt that if every member of the bar adds $100 to our fund that will not be any hungry youngsters on the streets of Boston.

A typical letter received from lawyers was the one from Attorney John M. Morrison, the brilliant young member of the firm of Lee, Lee, Hays & Morrison, 115 State Street.

"Mr. Jack Kennedy," "Sporting Department," "Boston American," Boston, Mass. "Dear Jack," "This will acknowledge receipt of your letter of even date with regard to the 'Boston American's' Christmas Basket Fund. I hasten to reply very happy for the opportunity thus afforded me to help in such a noble cause."

Then from Attorney James M. Swift, 115 State Street, "I am very glad to find you are checking for $100 to the Sports Department Christmas Basket Fund. I think it is a fine work."

Attorney Warren V. Taylor writes, "In response to your letter, I enclose $100 for the Boston American's Christmas Basket Fund. I am glad to see the handling of this important charity."

GREAT RUSH OF CHECKS.

The mail has been very busy with great letters containing checks from members of the bar. Lawyers with the possible exception of clerks and members of the medical profession, have a better knowledge of the sufferings of the poor than other people. It is, therefore, natural that they should eagerly respond to our appeal for funds.

Lawyers, when they think the age has always been among the chief givers to charity.

Members of the sporting fraternity are very much alive to the needs of the poor. Paul Reed, sports editor, who recently defeated Frank Moody, registered with a ten dollar bill.

Paul is an old friend of our fund.

Myron P. McCreedy, talented writer, who has added $100 to our fund, writes, "I am glad to see the handling of this important charity."

JOSEPH P. KENNEDY LISTED

Joseph P. Kennedy, a bank president, who has added $100 to our fund, writes, "I am glad to see the handling of this important charity."

A collection at the Moody A. C. of the Boston Athletic Association, courtesy of Cecil Dodge and the Boxing Commission, totaled $470.

Johnny Madden, matchmaker of the Attorney A. C., added $100 to our fund. Johnny Madden, matchmaker of the Attorney A. C., added $100 to our fund.

DOGGER'S PILOT A GRAVE CONDITION

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 12.—(Willard) Robert, manager of the Dogger's, has never been another ball uniform. The veteran leader who is in a weakened condition at his home, after five weeks' illness of pneumonia, was reported much worse today after a bad night, and grave complications are feared in connection with steadily increasing abdominal pains.

The physician who has been attending to the Dogger's and former catcher of the Baltimore Orioles is suffering with pneumonia and his condition is feared to be fatal.

"To the Dogger's," who is known to thousands of fans, contracted his illness in October while on a trip to the States.

Though his family has had a good deal of hope for his early recovery, Robinson himself, it is known, has feared the worst.

Early in the week he was bled and his condition was improved.
